IMA[®] Clark Johnson Achievement Award Call for Submissions

Background:

The Clark Johnson Achievement Award is a prestigious award that recognizes a student chapter whose efforts best reflect the characteristics of a great leader, Clark Johnson. Clark Johnson was the Chief Financial Officer of Johnson & Johnson from 1988 through 1997.

Clark Johnson's actions of outstanding leadership through innovation, organizational development, and interdependent partnerships showed his tremendous devotion to ensuring the business was successful. Further, it was through his continued vision and execution of strategic action plans that ensured Johnson & Johnson would continue to reach outstanding performance both in the marketplace and within the organization itself.

His efforts and guiding principles were not just supported within Johnson & Johnson but were also supported by IMA[®] (Institute of Management Accountants). Clark Johnson held many leadership positions within IMA where he continued to demonstrate and promote his ideals. The years of his active service with both organizations can be seen through his visionary planning, as he left a legacy of successful ideas and tremendous opportunity for future leaders to embrace and continue successfully.

Selection Criteria:

- The Clark Johnson Achievement Award is designed to recognize an IMA student chapter whose efforts best reflect outstanding leadership through innovation, organizational development, and interdependent partnerships.
- Further, this chapter demonstrates a mastery of the needed skill sets listed above in a complex environment where students' best interests remain their primary focus.
- Finally, to achieve this award, student chapters not only must demonstrate these necessary skill sets, but they should also have strategic action plans that support this level of success for the chapter in years to come.
- The student chapter chosen as the winner will receive a $5,000 monetary award in addition to a plaque recognizing this achievement.
